Edgar Allan Poe Thoughts

Beauty of whatever kind, in its supreme development, invariably excites the sensitive soul to tears.

All religion, my friend, is simply evolved out of fraud, fear, greed, imagination, and poetry.

Deep into that darkness peering, long I stood there, wondering, fearing, doubting, dreaming dreams no mortal ever dared to dream before.

If you wish to forget anything on the spot, make a note that this thing is to be remembered.

Words have no power to impress the mind without the exquisite horror of their reality.

Experience has shown, and a true philosophy will always show, that a vast, perhaps the larger portion of the truth arises from the seemingly irrelevant.

The death of a beautiful woman, is unquestionably the most poetical topic in the world.

That pleasure which is at once the most pure, the most elevating and the most intense, is derived, I maintain, from the contemplation of the beautiful.

The boundaries which divide Life from Death are at best shadowy and vague. Who shall say where the one ends, and where the other begins?
